We have frequently expressed our opinion, that Louis Napoleon, being the representative of the pepuhar feeling and wishes of a vast majority of the French nation, would, in all probability, be able to carry out his peculiar views of government and policy however arbitrary his actions and desires may ap-pear in the eyes of republicans of other nations. Monce we do not attach much importance to any temporary check he may meet with from the legislative body of France, indications of which are perceived in the last political news from Paris.

Short sighted people do not look upon the real besis on which Louis Napoleon stands. They forget that he owes his position and overwhelming power and influence to the great name of Napoleon, and the attachment of the French people to the Bonaparte family, as a dynasty of the people, in contradistinction to the old dynastics of Europe, founded on the military achievements, robberies and piracies of the middle ages. The French people, when they salled Napoleon to the consulate for life, and afterwards to the empire, by a majority of about three millions of votes, showed their determination to reject the Bourbons as well as the sangainary republic of Robespierre and his successors, and to establish a dynasty of their own choice, based on the great achievements and services of Napoleon. They determined to place him at the head of the new dynasty thus established, regardless of his errors and despotic course. The temporary seigns of the Bourbons, including that of the head of the house of Orleans, did not have the effect to change the desires and purposes of the French mation

The short-lived provisional government of Lamartine and his colleagues, and the readiness with which the people called Prince Louis Napoleon to the Presidency of France, after he had been preeluded by years of exile from showing his abilities for administering to the public service in any capaciby, proved the attachment of the new generation to the name of Napoleon, and their determination to place in power one of his family who would be sure to carry out his ideas of government. If any one doubt this, let him look to the election of President of France in December, 1848. The total number of votes polled throughout France was 7,359,000, of which Louis Napoleon received 5, 434, 226, or a greater numerical majority than had called Napoleon to the empire in 1804. This election of 1848 took place when Louis Napoleon was comparatively unknown personally to the people of France; but after three years of his administration, when the terms of the constitution would have consigned him to private life at the end of this year, how was the coup d'état of Louis Napoleon received by the people in December last ? Seven millions of the votes of the people against an inconsiderable minority, preved his towering popularity, and the will of the French nation, that the Napoleon dynasty should

We, therefore, see no probability of a change of geverament in France, which would either restore the Bourbons or House of Orleans to the throug, or establish a republic on any basis which should deprive Louis Napoleon of the sovereign power, or drive the Bonapartes into exile. As long as Louis Napeleon lives, and manages affairs according to the taste and habits of the French people, it would seem that he has a good chance of being sustained.

The views now and formerly expressed by us in the HERALD, we see are those entertained by the authors of the new work, just published in this city, entitled " The Napoleon Dynasty, or the Histery of the Bonaparte Family, by the Berkeley Men." Speaking of Louis Napoleon, the author of his biography, in this work, says:-

his biography, in this work, says:—

"It would be prepesterous to suppose that an individual like Louis Napoleon, without wealth, and destitute of power, should, in a day, spring from something more than obscurity—the odium of repeated failures—into an empire whichcost Napoleon the Great many years of incomprehensible toil, and almost miraculous achievments. It all seems to us to admit of a very simple solution. France itself was ready for his coming, or his coming never would have been greeted as it was. The Napoleon dynasty is and will be, for some time to come, an inevitable government in France; it is the only possible compromise between Bourbonism or the past, and republicanism or the fature."

But, what if Louis Napoleon should become un-

But, what if Louis Napoleon should become unpopular, make a mismove on the political chessboard, or be taken away by death, is there no other individual of the Bonaparte family now among the survivors, to perpetuate the Napoleon dynasty, and keep up the favorite idea of the French masses? The work before us, which is a highly interesting gallery of portraits, artistic and intellectual, gives us a list of the Bonapartes now living; and we find they are more numerous than the Bourbons now in existence, including the members of the Orleans

The history of the Bonapartes referred to gives eighteen separate biographies, illustrated by handcome portraits; and of these eighteen individuals, only two are now living, viz :- Jerome Bonaparte, the last surviving brether of Napoleon, and now President of the French Senate; and Louis Napebeen, President of France. But the members of the family of the third and fourth generations, from the parents of Napoleon, are numerous, and increasing, consisting of the lines of Lucien, Jerome, Murat, and the Grand Duchess of Tuseany (sister of Napoleon), to which are to be added the family of Eugene Beauharnais (son of Josephine), now allied to four of the royal families of Europe. It thus appears that the Bonaparte stock still holds good, as a source from which the French people can look for rulers, as long as they continue attached to the name and ideas of Napoleon, orfavor a dynasty of the people.

It is worthy of notice, in the history of the Bonapartes, that some of the family married in the United States, and have thus become connected with this country. The book before us contains many interesting particulars on this subject, here-tofore unpublished.

Texas Items.

[From the N. O. Picayune, 4th inst.]

The steamship James I. Day, Capt. Talbot, arrived this morning from Texas. By this arrival we have dates from Galveston to the 29th ult.

The Galveston Civilian says that the crops continue to promise an abundant yield. The corn is made, and will afford a heavy surplus throughout the State. In the northern counties there is a heavy crop of wheat, and we are told in some neighborhoods it may be bought for thirty cents a buskel. If the cotton escapes the worm, the crop will greatly exceed that of any former year. The sugar crop is all that could be hoped at this time of year. The Washington Ranger says:—The past week has been quite showery, which has been of great advantage to the corn crop. We have heard several planters say that they will be able to afford corn at twenty-five cents per bushel. Never, in the history of Texas, has the corn crop looked so promising.

The following is from the Victoria Advocate:—

corn at twenty-five cents per bushel. Never, in the history of Texas, has the corn crop looked so promising.

The following is from the Victoria Advocate:—Our intelligence from the interior still continues of the most fintering character, as it respects the crops. Corn is now made, and the finest yield that has ever been made in this State, being on bottom land, not less than fifty bushels to the acre, and doubtless in many cases above that.

The cotton crops are also very promising, and should the worm not make its appearance, a very great yield will be realized, perhaps as high in some cases as a bale and a half to the acre.

Sugar came is also desing well, though but few persons in our section have as yet turned their attention to its culture.

A man named Bacom, who was sentenced to fifteen years imprisonment in the penitentiary for killing William Nibs, some two years since, in Fort to Bend county, escaped from the jail at Houston on the 25th ult., and made good his escape. It seems that Bacom had been furnished with tools, and had plaked the lock of his chains. When the deputy sheriff, Mr. Shepherd, took him his breakfast, he rushed out. A Mr. Cartwright immediately drew a lix shooter and told Shepherd he would shoot him if he did not stop. Cartwright immediately drew a six-shooter and told Shepherd he would shoot him if he shot Bacom, whereupon Shephard quietly permitted him to escape.

The officers and hands of the steamer Nick Hill have returned to Galveston, after getting up as far Porter's Biuff, on the Trinity, where they left the steamer. The freight was destined for Dallas, but the low stage of water rendered it impossible to proceed farther. Indeed, to get as far as Porter's Bluff required the utmost exertions, the giver above Magnolia being obstructed by rafts of consideral extent, which had to be cut away. The distan from Magnolia to Porter's Biuff, estimated at the hundred and fifty miles, was made in thirteen day Camb McCormick considers the river above Manolia, rather better than below, after the rafts a once removed, as there are no rock shoals whatever in the Upper Trinity.

The Lorisiature of Texas, at its last session in the Upper Trinity.

The Legislature of Texas, at its last session passed a law authorizing the several counties of the State to establish workhouses. The Indianola Buletin publishes this law in full, and appears to be opinion that it is very necessary in that counting the editor says.—"Not a week passes but some outrage is committed with impunity for the want some orison or proper authority to punish; in conquence the people have to take the law into the own hands. In one case the culprit was ducked the bey and ordered to leave. In another, twellashes were administered, with a hint that if thief was found again at Indianola he would faworse; and since the other cases have arisen."

COMMERCIAL AFFAIRS

MONEY MARKET. MONDAY, July 12-6 P. There is nothing new in Wall street. Quotations stocks remain about the same as previously quoted. demand for Reading Railroad stocks was active, and transactions to the usual extent. At the first board Jersey Zinc declined % per cent; Montgomery, %; Railroad, 1/4; Harlem, 1/4; Delaware and Hudson, the second board North American Trust advanced & cent; Harlem ¼; Stonington, 1; Florence and Keyp 14. Harlem was well sustained, in the face of an inco of stock by the conversion of bonds; and the bulls done the company some service, at all events, by pelling the bears to resort to such a method of suppl themselves with stock. This is an old game in street—one which the bears have had several opporties of practising. At the close the market was al more buoyant.

The news from Australia, via London, is the most portant of any vet received from that interesting tion of the world. But for the confirmation of six accounts received in the early part of the California discoveries, we should be disposed to doubt the corr ness of the statements published in the English journ From all that we can gather relative to the gold proin Australia, that country is likely to throw Califo almost entirely in the shade. There is very little d but that the product of gold in Australia will continu increase from year to year, and that the estimate for year will be fully realized. Eighty millions of dollar gold dust is put down as the product for the first y Most of this will find its way into England and be contrated in London, principally in the Bank of England on the 19th of June the Bank of England had in vaults twenty-one and a half millions sterling, a circulation of notes to a corresponding amount, reserved notes amounted to nearly fourteen millions ling. Under the amended charter of the bank it is lowed to issue fourteen millions sterling of bills government securities, and all issues over that amo was to be pound for pound of builton or coin hand. It therefore appears, by the latest return, t the entire amount of notes issued by the bank, in circu tion, has a corresponding amount in specie in the va of the institution, leaving a reserved issue of fourt millions sterling below the legal standard. Notw standing this fact, money was never more abundan England than at this moment, and rates of interest at merely nominal points. The rapid accumulation of gold in the vaults of Bank of England, and in all the great banking insti-tions of Europe, has already created much specular in the minds of financiers relative to the probable of of such an enormous accession to the metalic wealt the world. It is not, in fact, the amount already as mulated which causes so much apprehension, as the fu-ture product of gold in the two countries, which have, it is represented, inexhaustible supplies. Two or three years' receipts, at the rates already realized, might not make much difference even if commercial affairs and industrial pursuits generally received no impetus from any length of time, without some outlet, would ultimately result in a complete derangement in the various financial systems of the world, upset all measures of value, and bring about a new organization of the finances of every government in existence. We have so much faith in the power of financial and commercia; affairs regulating themselves, if left to the operations of natural causes, that we do not anticipate those evils which appear to many so sure of being realized. The Bank of England has for many years been stretching out its arms in every direction, to gather together all the gold and silver bullion floating about the world. Previous to the production of so much of this metal in California and Australia, this policy was without doubt a sound one, as it gave England a power and position in financial affairs, which enabled her merchants and manufacturers to centroll the markets of the world, and give employ. ment to her millions of operatives. When the supply of precious metals in circulation—representing wealth—was limited, and below the actual wants of the world for comnercial purposes, it was an important matter to accumulate by favorable balances of trade, as large a portion of the total as possible; but now the matter is entirely different. In times past it was the movements of specie from one country to another, which affected favorably or unfavorably the operations of trade and commerce. The supply increased so imperceptibly that it had no influence upon the aggregate; and whichever nation had the power to call for any balance of trade in builion. controlled the price of property and the markets in the debtor's territory. What one lost another gained, and one was injuriously affected by its loss, while the other was made more prosperous by its gain. It is very different now. The immense accumulations of gold bullion in Great Britain and other parts of Europe, have not been drawn from the active circulation of this or any other country. It has not been transferred from New York, where it was required to give life and activity to trade, but it has been taken from the bowels of the earth in California and Australia, and put into the vaults of the banking institutions of the Old World, where it is just about as useless as when it was in the caverns of the Sierra Nevada. The Bank of England has paid the full value for this bullion, and it has become such an enormous dead weight that the profits of the institution are likely to be seriously affected. This accumulation in Great Britain, in the face of a restricted paper currency, is a more serious matter than it would be if the issues of paper money were in smaller donominations. Even in this country, with bank issues from one dollar upwards, an accumulation of large amounts of specie in the banks is apprehended, with all the facilities we possess for its reduction, by limiting the circulation of bills of small sums. In England, the receipts of gold from California and Australia have gone directly into the bank, the channels of circulation having previously been filled, while in this country it has gone into active circulation, the currency having previously been composed principally of paper. The effect of the large product of gold will, therefore, be first felt in Europe, and it will be a long time before an accumulation of gold takes place in this country, to an extent sufficient to injure any important local interest.

Total for two weeks, ending July 10th. This is very fair for the season; but near

2.228,496 $3,412,466 the aggregate was in specie. Of the merchandise ex-Staves 38,000 $2,003 Sp. Turp., gais.950 $552 the aggregate made breadstuffs form the bulk of the total value. For several weeks past, there has been a compa-

ely active outward movement in breadstuffs, and shipments have frequently exceeded in value those obton. A very great variety of small articles compour exports, which do not amount to much in ue. Any foreign demand for the innumerable small ctures of the country gives employment to a ge population, and keeps in a healthy state these niches of the custry. Our great staple products—cotton, seco, and breadstuffs—are the only items in our exrt trade of much importance, and but for which we uld have very little to pay for our immense importane this month are likely to be very heavy; while our ports, notwithstanding the large shipments of specie, are likely to be comparativel	y ilmited.
